In 2005, designer Meghan Noland launched her namesake collection of knits, tunics, dresses and tops in the United States. Drawing inspiration from the counter culture of the 1960s, Noland's pieces quickly gained recognition within the elite American fashion community. Noland describes her clothing as art which she hopes inspires her legion of international fans, she explains, "my goal has always been to channel my aesthetic and voice in the form of wearable art, whether within nature or the culture of Los Angeles. My creative vision is inspired by life and reflected in the collection I create each season".

Meghan Noland cultivated her love of fashion while attending New York's prestigious Fashion Institute of Technology. After attending F.I.T., Noland worked with several fashion brands including the house of Versace, Bill Blass, Todd Oldham and other notable F.I.T. alumni, Calvin Klein. Working among these fashion powerhouses, Noland became an expert at combining prints and colors which later became the foundation for her own brand upon opening her doors in 2005. Later, Noland relocated to Los Angeles and began overseeing her own brand drawing inspiration of notable designers including John Galliano, Elsa Schiaparelli and Marcia Curly Israel.

Today, Meghan Los Angeles is sold in over 30 countries and has sold to department stores such as Harrods London, Henri Bendel, Nordstrom and Neiman Marcus as well as specialty boutiques Kitson Los Angeles and Intermix. Celebrity fans include Nicole Kidman, Angelina Jolie, Rachel Bilson, Shakira, Kristen Bell and Sharon Stone.
